West Virginia

"I'd rather live on the side of a mountain, than wander through canyons of concrete and steel. I'd rather laugh with the rain and sunshine, and lay down in some starry field."

"This state is special to all West Virginians and anyone who appreciates the beauty of nature. Lucky is the person who has spent a night or two in the back country around Dolly Sods and Greenbrier County, or has stood on a cliff overlooking New River Gorge and its long-abandoned towns, like Hawks Nest, MacDougal, and Nuttallburg.

Each time you see the beauty, it forces you to look deeper inside yourself than ever before. You see the grandeur of it all and you sort of swell up with pride.

Some may think the people here are backward, but the real backward person is the one who seeks to destroy this beautiful land. This state is not inferior, it has its strip-mine scarred hills and junked cars, but it also has green trees, steep mountainsides, and wonderful people. All you have to do is travel a little and visit the out of way places to find the beauty.

The words I'm using may sound like something out of a travel brochure, but the feelings are real. Well, enough has been said. Take a good look at the pictures, pack your gear, and visit some of the places you see. This is West Virginia and I love her ... "

Friday, 4 April 1975

When I was in Boston a year-or-so ago, a lady said, "I've got friends in Richmond," when I told her that I was from West Virginia. I tried to tell her that West Virginia was a state, but I guess she still thinks I was from the western part of Virginia. I guess that that's just the way things go. I've spent most of my life in West Virginia, and I'm quite proud of my home state. Bare feet and bib-overalls have, at times been my fashion, but like anyone else in America, I know what shoes and trousers are . . .

New River . . . Fayette County

Dolly Sods

Greenbrier, County

It's really distressing to hear West Virginia referred to as a state of nothing but coal tipples and slag heaps. These things, of course, do exist, but to me they do not detract from the vast natural panorama that displays itself in my home state.

Polluted rivers and smog-filled skies are not indigenous to South Charleston alone. Why should West Virginia be singled out as a filthy, unclean state. I've seen much worse landscapes in New Jersey.

I sometimes think of West Virginians who have left to find financial happiness in the "Big City". If my plans go as I hope they will, I'll not be their follower. I'm not interested in the anonymity of the city. The city that can make you rich can run you ragged.

We've just come through the pseudo-environmental period, at least that's the way a supposedly learned instructor termed it. There are those who believe that the environmentalists will ruin this country, in fact, they are the only ones who can save it.

The ones who cry, "We aren't hurting anybody, leave us alone," are the ones who daily pollute our air and water or strip our land of its identity. They have to be controlled or there won't be anything left.

If the people don't listen to the "pseudo-environmentalists", it may be too late to even say,

I told you so . . .

R.R.

The economy or the environment, which should we choose? In one direction lies a distant, but certain destruction of nature and our resources. The other direction offers a long hard climb to the preservation of our natural beauty. We're going to have to suffer shortages and inconveniences for this preservation, but is that too much to ask for living in a world with green trees and hillsides or clean air and water?

Well, there you have it, two choices, I've already made mine.

... Huntington at sunrise

Huntington and Marshall — Sometimes a good combination sometimes a bad one. Good when they work together, bad when one tries to exercise control over the other.

Huntington, the town, the people, the parks, it may not be the most important city in the state, but certainly the cleanest and the friendliest.

Marshall — the faculty, the students, the campus, maybe not the best university in the state, but the potential for growth is there.

Huntington and Marshall — the inseparable pair. Perhaps too inseparable?

Sometimes I ask myself why I am here at Marshall. I really don't have an answer. At this time, it just seems like the right thing to do

I guess it's a pretty nice place to be, but if I could have my drothers, I'm sure I'd be someplace else.

Saturday, 5 April 1975

And the world goes on. Friday nights at Marshall University are unexplainable in print. If my reader is a student, you know how it is.

My academic experiences seem to be a long string of déjà vu realizations that line up like dominos ... Three years or so back and a year or so forward. A stream of professors, talking about different subjects, but all sounding the same. "YAKA YAKA YAKA." Maybe it's all just a political conspiracy to keep me off the job market for four years.

Of course, there's the "educational experience" I am supposed to be going through. Maybe it's just one of those things that you can't recognize until it's all over I'll just have to wait and see if all this education has really done so much good.

Who knows what lurks in darkness?

Editor's Note-Photos taken by Daniel Webster, visiting photographer from Delma Studios of Maryland.

Great expectations and

Future exhalations

Relate to a phase

In far-flung days

Which will never be

For you, nor me.

To say, "I was,"

As man often does,

Talks of a past

Which didn't last.

What was before

Is no more.

So "what will be"

We'll never see,

So I guess one must say

That there's only today,

And one just can

Express "I am."

Homecoming 1974 was typical of most Marshall Homecomings. Not only did we lose the football game, Seals and Crofts were three hours late and very few alumni came home. High points of Homecoming had to be the West Hall worm (in the parade) and Wolfman Jack.

Guest Speakers

Throughout the year Marshall University's campus is frequented by many guest speakers. Their topics range from Thurber to the Pueblo Incident, and from poetry to rape.

Charles Osgood, CBS broadcast journalist, speaking in Old Main Auditorium. Osgood's "newspoems" have earned him a title of "Poet in Residence" at CBS. The following poem was quipped by Osgood:

It's the cruelest thing I've ever seen
How life can be ornery and mean
And it takes all that's in ya
To land in West Virginia
And find that you follow John Dean.

John W. Dean III, convicted Watergate conspirator, appeared at Memorial Field House before a crowd of over 3,000. "I'm not here to prove crime pays, I've just got a lot of things to say about Watergate that I've never had an appropriate time to say," Dean said.

The Parthenon

While 1974 at Marshall was relatively free of student demonstrations, at least one did occur. David Williamson, editor of The Parthenon, and Mike Hall, editor of Argus Magazine, were the leaders. The two were sitting in the hall outside the newsroom on the third floor of Smith Hall, when for some odd reason, which still remains unknown, they decided to protest. For lack of a better cause they chose editorial freedom.

Williamson and Hall are seen above at the beginning of their protest. Later, probably because of the class change the number of protesters increased to seven. The protesters continued with shouts of "write on" until the duo decided that demonstrating was tiring, at which time they retired to the Student Center for a cup of coffee.

Off Campus Housing

Intramurals

Almost every organization on or off campus sponsors some sort of an intramural sport team, from fraternities to dorms to off campus apartment houses. This year (just to name a few) winning seasons were posted by Lambda Chi Alpha and Zeta Beta Tau, basketball and in softball, the Volunteers and Pi Kappa Alpha.

Campus Crusade
For Christ

While some Marshall students have taken up the causes of political reform, making friends or have lapsed into apathy; some have chosen another cause.

The cause is Jesus Christ, not religion or a code of ethics, but what they call a "personal relationship".

What's the reaction to all of this?

Dr. Hayes said this: "I am pleased with the religious emphasis Campus Crusade, the Christian Center and other groups have brought to our campus. They bring challenges to students to look at their commitments and activities. The campus is a better place to be because of their influence."

Broadcasting

Marshall University's broadcasting system is located in the Communications Building in the back part of Smith Hall. WMUL radio and WMUL television are responsible for airing such programs as, "Jazz Tonight", "Sounds of the Big Bands", and "Soul Express".

Streaking?

One Sunday evening, last February, the weather decided to turn a sultry warm 65 degrees. It was too much for approximately 500 Marshall University students. After congregating at the Fifth Avenue 7-11, at 11:30 pm, the crowd decided to travel down Fifth Avenue in an all out "Spring Run". Several people decided to take advantage of the warm weather and relieve themselves of their clothing, some students finding streaking not to their liking released the rear door of a cattle truck, allowing two cows to escape, while still others decide to rock a taxi cab.

In any event, the students expelled some of their excessive energy and Marshall University was put back to bed around 4:30 am, Monday morning.

Football 1974

a season of frustration
and a new coach

If the success of an athletic team is measured by its victories, the football team lacked only one game of being a total failure. The lack of wins and apparently the fans reaction resulted in the resignation of Jack Lengyl. By the time this is read the first results of new football coach, Frank Elwood will have been seen. One thing is for sure, he can't help but improve on last year's record.

Basketball

High hopes for the traditionally outstanding basketball team crumbled as discipline problems and player attitudes compounded by some of the most fickle fans in the world produced a less than ideal team. Acutally, if the Herd knew what to do with a basketball once they got out of town they'd have been great.

Wrestling

While the football and basketball teams were less than hoped for, excitement filled Gullickson Hall whenever the Marshall Matmen went into action.

The swimmers, like the wrestlers fared better than their counterparts in football and basketball. Coach Saunders again turned the Gullickson Hall pool in to the cite of victory for the "Bubbling Herd."

Minor Sports

Marshall University is not only composed of football and baseball teams but has its share of supposedly minor sports, such as tennis (men's and women's), volleyball and women's basketball. Yet, each of the participants in these events do not feel as if they are participating in a lesser sport.

There were many sports teams that the CJ was unable to photograph. Women's swimming, women's tennis, cross country, men's and women's volleyball. The CJ can only hope to do better next year.

Editor

Baseball

The Herd baseball team finished the season with 23 wins and 9 losses. This record shows a 17-1 mark at home and only a 6-8 record for the road games. The Herd as a whole team was hitting .304, paced by Mark Gross and Mike Horan.

Track

One of the biggest events Marshall's track team participated in this year was the MU Invitational Track meet held April 26. Thirteen schools participated in the day long event.

One day
in the life of Marshall

Tuesday April 8, 1975

Tuesday April 8, 1975. On a calendar in Laidley Hall, a coed had counted the days backward from the last final exam day of the semester. The most important thing about April 8 to her is that there are only 32 days left before she can go home for the summer.

To others, that day was a little more important. Many of the 10,000 plus students, faculty and staff at Marshall celebrated a birthday. Others celebrated a wedding anniversary. To some, it meant one week left to prepare their tax returns and get them in the mail.

An A on an exam, a bee sting, seeing old friends, deep trouble because menstruation is two weeks late, breaking an engagement, securing a new lover, Ohio beer and Cuban grass, a new John Denver album, assembling to share Jesus, a phone call from home — the day meant many other things to many other people.

This section of the Chief Justice is an attempt to provide an opportunity for the people at Marshall to relate to their experiences during a day at the University. It cannot claim completeness. The final creation is but a fragment of a total portrait. A perfect record of the complexity of the human elements involved in the University is an achievement, impossible to even attempt.

This section is only a collection of perspectives of Tuesday, April 8, compiled into one single picture created in the minds of 30 photographers working on campus that day. The 144 photographs used here were selected from over 900 submitted. These 900 were compiled from a total number of exposures totalling over 15,000, recorded on one quarter-mile of film.

The idea for this section of the yearbook came from a special issue of Life magazine depicting "One Day in the Life of America."

Marshall President Robert B. Hayes was out of town on April 8. Otherwise, he would have had a coed with a camera following him constantly. A photographer followed Student Body President Tom Searles throughout the day. Another photographed a commuter, and another followed a dorm resident. Others photographed a University Heights couple, off-campus residents, each building on campus, sports and as many activities as possible. Others were free to roam, and photograph whatever they found going on.

Radio alarm clocks in the dorms begin to blare with the sound of WKEE calling the students to the morning routine of getting ready for classes. For Buildings and Grounds the day has already begun, they are unlocking the buildings and turning on the lights, readying them for classes.

Elsewhere in the city, instructors, administrators and commuting students drink their morning cup of coffee and look over the news in the Herald-Dispatch before making their daily trek to campus.

Wayne County News is delivering April 8 copies of The Parthenon and campus security is just changing shifts.

Back in the dorms, razors and toothbrushes are being picked up and the sound of showers and hot-combs fill the air. While down in the cafeteria the cooks are frying bacon and French toast.

April 8 has just started.

the morning routine

For most of the people at Marshall the morning is routine. Coach Lawson teaches her tennis class, Irvin Harrison raises the flag, Buildings and Grounds begins to work on the lawns, Lynn and Jim Buten set up a tent for "camping day" at the nursery and in the cafeteria the cooks are finishing the breakfast dishes and beginning to start lunch.

In Gullickson, new football coach Frank Elwood has a meeting with his staff while elsewhere in the building, classes are going on and in the gym is the sound of a lone basketball player.

Some students will never see the classroom today. Some won't because they are ill, others because they haven't yet recovered from last night's party and for some students like Dana Frazer the classroom is a Cabell Huntington Hospital where she is a nursing student.

Coeds wait on their morning tennis class to begin.

Marshall's moppets

Besides the usual playing, painting and story telling it was "camping day" at the Marshall University Nursery School. The kids were able to wear packs and play in a tent. They roasted hot dogs and toasted marshmallows over an open fire (located inside a barbecue grill).

lunch time

Once each day the Marshall community postpones its activities for lunch. Students filter in the dorm cafeterias while others wander into the Student Center for the special of the day.

The faculty and administration can be seen on the 8th floor of Smith Hall, Wiggin's or in their office munching on a brown bag lunch. Commuters and off campus students flood the BBF, Sandwich Isle, JJ's, Monties', Frank's and the many other lunch spots that surround campus.

Those that live close enough walk home and refuel with anything from peanut butter to yogurt.

afternoon

After the lunch time lull the campus again becomes filled with activity. The intramural fields are occupied with softball players and frisbee tossers. Guitar and harmonica music can be heard on the Student Center Plaza. The early morning' apparel of sweat shirts and jeans is being replaced by T-shirts and cut-offs. The lawn is dotted by couples enjoying the sun and students studying.

The baseball team is in the process of sweeping a double header from WVU. While the baseball team is at Bill Mire Field the track team is practicing on campus. Only the offense has spring football drills today and the golf team has its normal practice at the Guyan Country Club.

a day of people and personalities

Certain things identify a person it might be the way they dress, the way they smile or the way they decorate their office. This is how some of the Marshall community looked on April 8.

night life

Most of the classes are over and the day is slowly drawing to an end. Before long the bars will be seeing the nights customers. Many students and townspeople attend the second night's performance of Dr. Whear's "Chief Justice." In Hodges Hall over three hundred students gather to listen to a talk on the "Christian's viewpoint on sex." The classroom buildings house night classes and late working teachers. In Old Main, University Theater rehearses for "A Little Night Music." Off campus apartments are the site of a few parties and in the dorm and the library, books are the center of attention.

absurdity

If a day at Marshall could be described in one word, that word would be absurdity.

There is something about Marshall that makes it absurd.

Where else can you go to a school that has a fountain shaped like a giant tulip? Or find a pot plant growing in the dorm? What other school has a gym with gargoyles? Who else but a Marshall student would keep their wine, catsup and chocolate syrup in the living room? Where else could you find a teacher digging post holes in front of the Student Center? Or a bucket of dead rats? What other school has biology specimens so stupid they try to bite students fingers through a glass cage?

Only at Marshall, where absurdity is the norm.

Linda,
If mom sent my stuff ~~let~~ let me know no matter
what time it is.
Come on up.
How was the SPORTSMAN?

and still more absurdity

Special Thanks to ...

It's hard to suddenly leave a place you have been associated with for a whole year. I suppose all editors depart with mixed feelings and emotions. I am glad the book is finished, no more long hours, rushing to meet a deadline, cut classes, crummy food or stomach ulcers. Yet, I am sad because it is very lonely in the office, all the laughter, friendship, and fun have gone home.

I am not going to apologize for the book, the staff and I feel it is a good yearbook. I apologize to all those we left out and to those we disappointed. The staff and I wanted to create a book that would not end up in the water fountain or as a coffee table. A yearbook that is artistic and informative. A book that would do exactly what it is supposed to do — recall the year.

A well deserved and special thanks goes to the entire staff. But, there are a few who deserve even more; Ray Rappold, K D Lawson, Rick Haye, Arza Barnett, Gail Hollingsworth, Mike McGhee, Ed Miller and Jim Justice. Thanks for finishing your assignments, laying out pages and your good humor. (It was certainly needed.)

Melanie

P.S. Love and thanks to my grandmother, parents and to Jim for putting up with the long hours, my grouchy personality and short temper.
